[illegible] ... ATTENTION WHILE HE SPEAKS TO WORKINGMEN.

An Outdoor Meeting in Tompkins and the Exhibition in Event—Mr. Prophater a Great Victory in Illinois and New York.—Palmer Guest.—The Fishermen Discussed—The Tariff an Applied to Workingmen—An Invitation to Springfield.

A large and enthusiastic meeting assembled in Grand's Hall last evening to welcome "Private Jim" Pitts and the half dozen of good to him. On the stage were Democratic Orators Major John A. Sexton, U. S. Garfield, H. M. Fuller, Judge Kohlsaat, General Fitz, George E. Smith, Gen. E. S. Stevens, Col. Martin, Isaac Clements, John Gallagher, E. Bets, the Hon. C. L. Walker of South Bend, Indiana, George W. Ehrlinger, Dr. John F. Wilkins, Congressman George E. Adams, and numerous others. Private Pitts presided, and introduced John Gallagher and the orators, who were received with bursts of delight and their remarks frequently applauded. Mr. Fuller introduced Col. Isaac Clements of Cattaraugus to the time until Pitts should arrive—and as all is acceptably, during other things he said that one of the most gratifying events to the speakers was the large number of young men who were present ready and eager to fight the battle of protection as they had never seen pop-eyed fought for before in the country. They were organized to wrest from the efforts of Republican Governor Black & Co., which could not prevail against them if they worked and acted together as they were being overpowers.

The Hon. Herbert Crawford of Wisconsin followed Mr. Clements with a talk on the tariff. He said that of the seven schools in Australia for the Blind but one were Protectionists who were voting of the wants and evils of the manufacturing classes. He found a good point in showing that of the two greatest trusts in the country (Sugar Trust and Jay Gould's Telegraph Trust) Jay Gould and Mr. Havemeyer were the two largest contributors to the campaign fund of the Democratic party. Change or alter, to consist with him the same thing. He would not alter if necessary to accomplish his end would rather have had no material than an alloy.

Congressman George E. Adams was greeted on his appearance, which did not subside until he promised that the audience was no longer kept standing would have to be held on the sidewalk. Over this evening the chair is Senator Palmer and speeches were made by Gen. E. S. Stevens and W. A. Prophater, Mr. Adams talked of the April, and compared the prices results of Cleveland and Harrison, Palmer and Pitts.

[illegible]

It was really a touch even Pitts could not accompanies, but he was subject to many, by the city. He looked pale and tired, but brightened visibly when the crowd was announced him to the echo. He said:

I have taken the seats and promised that people could see and hear. I have to say to you that I have not come to say a word about the campaign. I will not for your encouragement though I don't think you need any that my old county in Cook County with a majority of 25,000. I believe that if Cook County had done you ought to make it an even 50,000. That what you are trying to do at these conditions and hope your Congressmen. I say this to the friends and I know this to be honest, upright, and intelligent, and I put to you that you are to have the last majority, or even. You have to do it. Then we must go out and organize the Democracy of Cook County. We must organize and stay organized from now until the 5th of November. We want to go to the polls and vote for the principles of true Democracy. We want to go to the polls and vote for the principles of true Democracy. We want to go to the polls and vote for the principles of true Democracy

GROVER'S GREAT BLUNDER

HOW THE DEMOCRATS OF CHICAGO ARE DISGUSTED.

The Position Assumed Out by His Own Supporters for Talking to Party Clubs at the Expense of the Dignity of a Candidate for President—No Enthusiasm in Washington—English Opinion Voices the Awakening Sentiment.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—[Special.]—The Republicans were laughing merrily today over what they call another Cleveland's gaffe. Ever since the convention took its recess at Minneapolis Grover Cleveland has been guilty of what his supporters call indiscretion, but which his opponents say is nothing short of criminal stupidity. Even the Democratic papers which support Cleveland's candidacy are beginning to express their disgust at the manner in which he has been conducting the campaign, and some of the most influential Democratic papers in the country have openly declared that the President ought to be ashamed of himself for the way he has been making a show of himself before the country. Even the Democratic managers in this city are disgusted with the President's course, and they say that he has made a fool of himself by his speeches to the delegations which have visited him at Washington. They say that he has made a fool of himself by his speech to the Democratic Club of this city, and that he has made a fool of himself by his speech to the Democratic party on account of his letter of acceptance. It seems, therefore, that Mr. Cleveland has made a record for himself which is unparalleled in the history of the country.

The Secretary Hamilton Club is probably the most enlightened body to express the sentiment of a man who has been elected.

It was a ridiculous idea to take the President from the White House and put him on the stump, but it was a still more ridiculous idea to have him make speeches to delegations of visiting Democrats.

[illegible]

The Times has an elaborate table of the returns on the subject, and says in an editorial:

The New York World criticises the Secretary of State for the tone of his reports, and says that it is impossible to keep pace in any way to the record that has been made by Secretary Bayard.

The Times-Herald remarks: "A more ridiculous spectacle than the public has witnessed in any civilized country than the foreign and confidential agents of the Government of President Cleveland has endeavored to get a right on the country obviously for electioneering purposes." It generally regards the action of the Secretary of State in this matter as a reflection on the President, and says that after the election he must accordingly call others to Secretary Bayard, as others should be served.

[illegible]

The Morning Post, in the course of a long leader (Oct. 1), says:

We for the most of the American press, in offering an official to United States and through it to the Republican party, have done nothing to keep us informed. This contrasts very unfavorably with the action of the Democratic press, which has been constantly keeping us informed of the progress of the campaign. The Republican party has been very backward in the matter of the representation of a foreign Power to intervene in our domestic affairs. In that case hundreds of our press of both parties have denounced such action on the part of Lord Sackville, but we could have wished that the Republican party had taken the initiative in this matter, and not left it to the Democratic party to do the work for it. Indeed, it would be apparent that the American press was taken aback by the sudden appearance of Lord Sackville as a political character to affect the result of the Presidential election. We feel that the Government in England desires the success of the Democratic party to the United States.

The New York Herald, one of Cleveland's strongest supporters, makes this move appear more than any other paper in the Washington dispatch today which gives the impression that according to them to prevent the British from meeting the proposition. This is the most unfortunate of the acts of the President. The duty was taken solely by the President, and since this becomes known it will be severely censured by the Democratic press. The duty was taken solely by the President, and since this becomes known it will be severely censured by the Democratic press. The duty was taken solely by the President, and since this becomes known it will be severely censured by the Democratic press.

There is no doubt that the movements have greatly harmed the President. He may win, but even now he will not get more than a bare majority of the electoral votes, and there are people in this city and elsewhere who are trying to help the Democrats and Republicans, and with the Democrats, the talent upon him and defeat him yet. The election will probably be held on the Foreign Office, which will be known.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1888.

The money market was dull, with fair over the Sabbath rate for bank loans. Local securities were in moderate demand, and bank stocks were stronger. New York exchange was firm at par, and sterling steady. Stocks in Wall street were rather dull, with the tone firmer.—The Chicago produce markets were more active, and irregular, with a little interest in battles, a fair excitement among the wheat shorts, and more strength in provisions. No comparison with Tuesday's dull trade. Dec. wheat began here and rose 2c more higher, closed for May ½ cent higher, corn ½ cent lower, oats easy, rye ½ cent lower, barley steady, except that 2c was much higher for October, and December 1 cents lower.

Gazing is given out that Mr. Charles Tupper is to succeed Minister West at Washington. It will be greatly appreciated in the President and Secretary Bayard and will go far towards clearing away that grief over the loss of Sackville Lord Sackville. Mr. Charles Tupper is commissioned as one of the fisheries treaty commissioners and the right lower of the Digby Dickey in carrying out the understandings between him and the Administration. He is also the gentleman who in one of the recent speeches expressed the hope that the policy of the Democratic party in the United States is a free trade policy and therefore one that should be applauded heartily in Canada and England. It was this same gentleman who in a speech in Parliament a few months ago declared that the interests of Canada and the Cleveland Administration were identical. Mr. Charles Tupper deserves a tapering, patriotically and in many ways qualified to succeed Lord Sackville. If places be thrust forth by the latter's ineptitude, to some Cleveland were selected, and not give away the admirable position's secrets.

A scrap has started recently by some Democrat that Harrison had lost the friends among the survivors of the old regiments the Democratic papers. These editors who fabricate their patient manufacture as many a Ghosty Ball have succeeded that promises of party malice by signing, in the number of six, a letter in which they express their sentiments at the nomination of their old leader for the Presidency. They say with truth and sincerity:

> That you never began the serving the title and dominion of the Democratic party, and that you have always thought the best thing to have done was to support the ticket as the people to the public.

What they said themselves here, here you please regular, through columns, but they did not say with many crying tongue, that it is the duty of every Democrat to support the ticket, no matter what he thinks of the nominee, and that the party is bigger than the head of the party, and the party is bigger than the party. They said, in effect, that the party was bigger than the party, and that the party was

CAPT. O'BRIEN TESTIFIES.

HE DENIES ALL IN THE ABSENCE OF EVIDENCE.

He Promises Solemnly That Ireland Never Has Had, Nor Expects, and Its Delegates Have a Guaranteed—Not Only Is There Failure to Show the Guilty Charge, but There Are Statements Tending to the Success of the Irish.

London, Oct. 31.—There is much speculation as to why the Times did not call Mr. O'Brien to the stand so early in the case. It is supposed that the real reasons are not free from the meeting of reports of submissions and that of the cases the meeting was to speak to such cases. Another theory is that O'Brien evinced much to damages to Gladstone as not to Parnell and favorable to Gladstone, and would gain a party purpose in supporting Gladstone for Gladstone's coming meeting in Birmingham.

The evidence was based largely to with documentary speculations. It was called upon by Mr. Webster in his opening speech to prove some of the most damaging charges against Parnell. O'Brien was expected to be the witness who would show and clear the Parnell move therefore and others manufactured charges, but to counteract the position after the Parnell Par[illegible] examination and after afterwards, and actually have that motive. It was known that O'Brien was a prominent leader of Parnell, and was excited to do his part the Irish party as such damage as possible, to the Parnell cause as a section of Gladstone's [illegible] With evidence to Parnell, and his statements was unbroken. In addition he was known as an extremely honest and upright man and an having enjoyed for many years the acquaint confidence of Parnell.

O'Brien among his most around to feel the magnitude of the case he was taking. He looked pale and nervous and took seats on the ground, not looking at Parnell, and acted generally after the manner natural of the Irish witness. On the second [illegible] with his letters he [illegible] record heard protest and gave no evidence with considerable ability. Court was then ordered and at once [illegible] to adjourn to the room [illegible] Parnell, Gladstone, and some one of the chief counsel engaged [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

(C. Spencer's Los Angeles Tribune Cal. Sept. 1. The people of Chicago have for the past few days been a great deal excited over the death in that city of Mr. Carter H. Harrison, who for many years held prominent and responsible positions in the Democratic party. The excitement seems to have culminated when, in the Harrison church of which he was a member, on Sunday, the Rev. Dr. Locwenberg, alluded to the rights and responsibilities that had been put upon the deceased by representatives of the Democratic party. The announcement of such a departure and application was made to the vast congregation of which the deceased had been a member, and it was brought to the attention of the people in a way which at once made it the common topic of conversation. The sermon, of course, was the principal theme of discussion, and the manner in which the preacher handled the subject was such as to cause many to leave the church with the impression that the preacher had overstepped the bounds of propriety and had been guilty of a breach of taste in bringing the matter before the people in the manner he did. The impression of the morning was that of a

[illegible] gave him and some prominent people who were present to understand that the church was not to be used for political purposes, and that the pulpit was not to be made a political rostrum. The sermon was delivered in the evening, and the church was crowded to the doors. The preacher had evidently been informed that he was not to be allowed to make political capital out of the occasion, and he did not do so. He simply referred to the fact that Mr. Harrison had been a prominent Democrat, and that he had been honored by his party with many positions of trust and responsibility. He then went on to say that Mr. Harrison was a man who

OPPOSITION TO PALMER.

WOULD-BE CONGRESSMEN.

PEOPLE ARGUING TO DETERMINE THEIR DISTRICTS IN WASHINGTON.

A Full List of All the Regular Party Nominees Throughout the Country, as Well as the Opposition, Judgment Bearing Other than the Regular Party Designations—Many Are Present, but Only One Can Be Chosen.

The Congressional nominations of the two leading parties have practically been completed throughout the country, and below will be found the complete list of nominations as it stands today. In many cases no opposition candidates have been named against the dominant party, while here and there the opposition have various names each on Independent, Fusion, Anti-Machine, etc. The list will be found to contain the nominees of the two opposing parties in each State and district so far as such parties have made Congressional nominations. Wherever the Union Labor party has indorsed a nominee of one of the leading parties, or in turn its own nominee has been indorsed, that fact is indicated in the list. The New York City Democratic nominations, as usual, divide themselves, or split apart, into those by the Tammany and Civic Democracy, and where both parties agreed to a nomination the nominee is labeled United Democracy. As a matter of special interest to Illinois readers the list, as far as that State is concerned, represents the positions of all the parties—Republican, Democratic, Union Labor, Labor, and Prohibition.
